CAT NOW! PLZ

Original title: Må. Ha. Katt!
 First publication: October 2021
 Middle grade novel • 203 pp
 Publisher: Aschehoug
 Foreign rights: Danish (Straarup)
 Reading material: Norwegian

Eli is about to start sixth grade, and life sucks. Mom has moved (to "Shitty Stein"), Dad is quieter than ever, Billie doesn't want to be BFFs anymore, and everything is Eli's fault. Watching cat videos on YouTube and looking for cats online seems to be the only thing that helps. While browsing for cats, Eli finds Alf, a five-year-old, broad-shouldered black and white house cat. Can he solve this lame life? And most importantly: Can he become a YouTube star, a catfluencer?

Cat NOW! plz is a sore story full of humour and heart, about fragile friendships, cool cats, stupid parents, and the fear of being exposed.

If you're a fan of cat videos, you will love Eli and Alf!

... easily read and gripping

Marianne Lystrup, Vårt Land

... a rock solid debut ... told with vitality, humour and warmth

Judith Dybendal, Periskop

HOW TO DEAL WITH STORMY SPIRITS

Original title: Oppskrift mot ånder som knuser ting
 First publication: September 2022
 Middle grade novel • 198 pp
 Publisher: Aschehoug
 Reading material: English excerpt, Norwegian

The only thing Henry knows about his dead mother is that she was the best shoemaker in the world and that he and his father never must talk about her. If they do, terrible storms will come and crush everything in the small flat where they live. When the storm one day comes to school, Henry is blamed for the damages the storm causes. And when Henry's father, the famous opera singer whose voice has been poor since the death of Henry's mother, is in danger of losing his job, Henry must find out what his mother is trying to tell them. It requires curiosity and courage, good friends, and a girl with a silver cape, a bird, and a recipe for how to deal with stormy spirits.

A story about spirits, singing, silence, sorrow, and shoes.

Reminiscent of Astrid Lindgren and Roald Dahl.

Cathrine Krøger, Dagbladet 5/6 stars

Exceptionally good. If only every children's book was as effortlessly clear and well written as this book. ...

Her literary voice is fantastic, the rhythm, metaphors, and merry brutality is reminiscent of Astrid Lindgren and Roald Dahl. It's the same with the characters. ...

The ending is beautiful and sweet, with the good moral that ought to be in every children's book. I have no doubt that this book will be a success for fantasy readers in all ages.

Cathrine Krøger, Dagbladet 5/6 stars

Tyra Teodora Tronstad (b. 1972) is an author of acclaimed and awarded books for young adults and adults. She is twice awarded, and once nominated for, the Critics' Prize for Best Children's and YA Book. How to Deal With Stormy Spirits is her first children's book. Tronstad lives in Oslo, Norway.
